

Phillip Saucedo

April 8, 2025

Phillip Christopher Saucedo was a devoted husband, father, business owner, and friend — a man who lived with passion, loved without reservation, and believed in becoming better every single day. Born in Fontana, California, he carved out a life filled with discipline, humor, wisdom, and heart.

Phillip was the kind of man whose presence filled a room. Charismatic and sharply dressed, he radiated confidence and carried himself with a sense of dignity that never veered into arrogance. He was warm and approachable, with a gift for conversation — whether he was making someone laugh, offering advice, or listening deeply to the stories of others. His sense of humor was quick and playful, often marked by a teasing grin or his trademark tongue-out smirk when he found something truly funny.

At his core, Phillip was a family man. He met the love of his life, Sarah, in 1997, and from the beginning, their connection was magnetic — built on mutual respect, shared values, and an endless well of conversation. For 28 years, he was a loving, loyal, and selfless husband. Every decision he made, every risk he took, was for the benefit of his family. He made life feel seamless — from planning vacations to managing the household and caring for extended family — and always did it with joy and purpose.

As a father, Phillip was endlessly involved and present. He coached his children's soccer teams, cheered at wrestling matches, showed up for birthdays, concerts, and everything in between. He didn't just raise his children — he mentored them, challenged them, and showed them what it meant to be strong, loving, and kind. He believed in leading by example: waking up early to lift weights, eating clean, keeping things tidy, and being meticulous in his grooming, home, and habits. He took pride in his family and in raising children who would go on to embody the values he lived by.

Phillip had the soul of a Renaissance man. He loved combat sports and classical music, superhero movies and philosophy. He would just as easily be found watching a UFC fight with his son as attending the orchestra at the Redlands Bowl, grabbing tacos after a volleyball game, or playing poker with family and friends. He made life fun — karaoke nights, wine tastings, beach drives with the top down, barbecues by the pool — and he loved being surrounded by people, especially the ones he loved most.

His mind was endlessly curious. He read more books than most will in a lifetime and was constantly learning — not just for knowledge's sake, but to grow, to evolve, and to better understand life, faith, and the human spirit. He believed deeply in the power of mindset. "If you think, act, speak, and behave as the person you want to be," he would say, "you will become that." He lived this truth daily — stoic in adversity, joyful in the little things, and always working to be just one percent better.

As a business owner, Phillip was resilient and visionary. He and Sarah built and rebuilt businesses from the ground up, even winning Healthcare Entrepreneurs of the Year. He believed in providing for others — not just financially, but emotionally and spiritually. He was known for his generosity, quietly helping friends, mentoring young people, and even impacting strangers through a podcast interview that inspired hundreds with his thoughts on discipline, peace, and purpose.

Phillip's legacy lives on in his wife and children, in the lives he helped shape, and in the energy he left behind — one of strength, love, and light. He taught that life is to be fully lived, that peace is worth protecting, and that presence is the greatest gift you can offer those you love. He reminded everyone around him to live in the moment, to trust in God, and to never settle for anything less than growth.

“Love the Lord your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your mind and with all your strength... and love your neighbor as yourself.” — Mark 12:30–31

“I faced it all, and I stood tall, and did it my way.” — Frank Sinatra

Phillip is missed beyond measure and remembered with eternal love. He may be gone in the physical, but his spirit remains — a guiding force, a comforting presence, and a lasting light in the lives of all who knew him.
