“ I met Rachel and Jose Aldana in 2003 when I began dating their eldest son, Richard. I was welcomed with open arms and quickly became “one of the family”. There was never a dull moment when visiting their home. Rachel was quick to share amusing stories about raising a family of five children in the tiny confines of their Corona home, and there were plenty of stories to tell!

Rachel was an avid and talented crocheter. She loved to have something to work on, keeping her hands busy while watching classic movies on TCM. As the family got older, the need for crocheted baby items subsided, but that did not stop her from making items for anyone remotely connected to the family.

In June of this year, she was delighted to hear of a new great grandson coming soon. While in the hospital, she told me that she was already planning her project. She knew exactly what pattern she wanted to use, what color, she just needed to buy the yarn and getting going! Sadly, she was unable to begin this final project before she passed. While not nearly as talented as she, I will take up the mantle and crochet this “new bundle of joy” a little sweater in her honor. Momma, please guide my hands and overlook any mistakes!

With loving memories,
Renée Osburn Aldana
