“ I can envision Bud's "heaven." He is in a large library. The table is stacked with books, many left open to important passages. Bud is walking along the book shelves with his arm extended, his right hand brushing quickly along a row of Supreme Court Reporters. His movement slows as he looks for a specific volume. He stops and puts his fingers on the spine of a book, shakes his head and moves back to the volume just to the left. Taking the chosen book from the shelf, he fans quickly through the book and opens it to the page he was seeking. Quickly he runs his finger down the page and stops at footnote number 7. Without the need to read the note he turns to book to the young lawyer standing quietly beside him. "Here you are. This is just what you need to finish your argument," Bud says with a satisfied nod of his head. I was blessed to have had the Budman as my mentor for many years. It was always a treat to see him find "the case" in the library faster than the youngest computer nerd in the office. Gratefully, Sherry Gordon
